CREAM CITY IS MECCA OF THE UNIFORM RANK

Thousands Knights of Pythias Gather for the Biennial Convention of the Supreme Lodge of the Order

MILWAUKEE Wis., July 30.—Milwaukee is today the Mecca of tens of thousands of the most prominent and representative citizens of the United States. From President Taft's "four corners of the country" and from cities and towns in all the vast territory intervening the representatives of the Knights of Pythias are gathering for the biennial convention of the supreme lodge of the order and the encampment of the uniform rank.

For over a year the local committee of reception and entertainment, composed of the most prominent and active knights in this jurisdiction has been preparing for the advent of the mighty hosts that will sojourn in this city and suburbs during the next six days and even thus early the hundreds of strangers are willing to admit that the committee's work has been well done.

The decorations in honor of the convalesce are superb. On every hand, over doors and windows, spanning the streets or floating from tall staffs, are to be seen the helmeted knight and other emblematic designs, with a plentiful profusion of stars and stripes. The city hall and other public buildings, the hotels and large business houses and many private residences are handsomely adorned. Especially elaborate are the decorations of the Auditorium, which will be the scene of many of the chief social festivities in connection with the convention.

The arrivals and registration of the visitors and the completion of the final details of the week's programme will occupy tomorrow. The chief official action Monday will be the formal dedication of Camp Henry Parish Brown a canvas city of nearly 3,000 tents which will accommodate many of the visiting members of the uniform rank. The camp is located on a beautiful level stretch in the northwestern part of the city.

The feature of Tuesday's programme will be the grand military parade in which about 15,000 uniform knights will participate marching through the principal streets of the city to the reviewing stand, where the commander in chief and his staff and the members of the supreme lodge will be stationed to view the inspiring spectacle. The parade of the subordinate evening, following the same course taken by the military parade. A long list of prizes has been arranged for these events and for the competitive drills which will take place on the parade ground at the camp.

ENGINEERS OF NOTE TO VISIT

Also Possible That Secretaries Ballinger and Wilson Will Inspect Roosevelt Dam and Salt River Valley.

PHOENIX, July 30.—In the next few months Phoenix will probably be visited by several big men among them being Secretary of the Interior, Ballinger, Secretary of Agriculture, Wilson and the army commission named by President Taft to inspect the proclamation projects of the west. As yet no official notice has been received here of the coming of Garfield or Wilson, though announcement has been made that during their vacation period this summer, both of them would come into Arizona.

If Ballinger comes it will be to inspect the Roosevelt dam in the final stages of its completion, while the object of Wilson's visit would be to get in touch with local agricultural conditions and the forest reserves. Most of the cabinet members are combining business with pleasure. Secretary Wilson comes it will be the first time it is believed, that he has seen the Salt River valley.

Ballinger was here several months ago, and inspected both the Roosevelt and the Granite Reef dams, but now that the former is practically completed and will be turned over by the contractors before long though not officially accepted by the government for two years Ballinger will want to inspect the project before accepting the work of Contractor O'Rourke.

Late in September or early in October six prominent army officials will be in Phoenix to view the local project. They have been appointed by President Taft to view the western reclamation schemes before $20,000,000 in bonds, provided for by the law.

In the act making the big bond issue, it is stipulated that before any money is given a project for its completion the board of army officials must make an inspection and a

DOC HOLLIDAY, GUN FIGHTER, AND SOME STIRRING HISTORY

An article published in the New York Herald of June 17 purports to be an interview with Bat Masterson on "bad men" he has known, and tells among some other things of some characters well known to old timers in this section of Arizona and of events which stirred at the time and still live in the memories of many. The part which relates to Tombstone is worth the repeating and the facts can be verified from several in this city. Chris Selman is one of those who vouches for the truth of the general details.

"Speaking of the picturesque characters, I guess Doc Holliday stands in that category. I never liked him and few persons did. He had a mean disposition and differed from most of the big gun fighters in that he would seek a fight. He was a consumptive and physically weak, which probably had something to do with his unfortunate disposition. He was of a fine Georgia family and was educated as a dentist. He went West after shooting down several defenceless negro boys in a quarrel as to who should occupy a certain swimming hole. He made Dallas in the early seventies, and hung out his shingle, J. D. Holliday, dentist, but he soon quit that for gambling. His shooting of the negroes became known, and so he got a reputation as a bad man from the start and associated on equal terms with men of more notable record.

"He finally killed a man in Jacksboro and fled. Then he killed a soldier, and to avoid being caught by the military authorities made a desperate flight to Denver, across 800 miles of waterless, Indian infested desert. He made Denver in seventy-six. The law forbade him to carry a gun there, so he slipped a knife into his boot leg and presently carved up the face of one Bud Ryan, who bears the marks to this day. He then fled to Dodge City, where I first met him. He kept out of trouble in Dodge somehow, but presently wandered to Trinidad, Colo., where the first thing he did was to shoot and seriously wound Kid Colton. Then he escaped to Las Vegas, a boom town in New Mexico, where he disagreed with Mike Gordon and shot him dead in a doorway. Again he lit out five hundred miles across country to Dodge City. He went to Arizona with Wyatt Earp in 1880 and took part in the famous battles of the Earp brothers in and around Tombstone. He died of consumption in Glenwood Springs.

"I think it was the distinguishing trait of Wyatt Earp, the leader of the Earp brothers, that more than any man I have ever known he was devoid of physical fear. He feared the opinion of no one but himself and his self-respect was his creed. He landed in Wichita, Kans., in 1872, at the age of 26, a very quiet man, but a terror in action, either with his fists or a gun.

"The gang, which hung out in the San Simon valley, was one that terrorized the whole country and defied the troops for years. It was made up of Ike and Billy Clanton and Tom and Frank McLowry. Well, in a rash moment those four sent word that they were going to kill off the Earp family on a certain day, and sure enough they rode into Tombstone as they promised. The whole town watched the fight from the house-tops and it was sweet while it lasted. The four met Wyatt, Virgil and Morgan Earp and Doc Holliday face to face coming round a corner at a ten foot range and opened fire from behind their horses. The Earps charged and in a few seconds Billy Clanton and the two McLowrys were dead, each with six bullets in him. Ike threw down his gun and Wyatt let him go.

"In a few days Curly Bill, of an allied gang, potted Virgil Earp at night, nearly shooting off his right arm. Later Morgan was shot and killed at night through a window. It was clear enough that action was necessary if the rest of the family were not to go the same road, and Wyatt promptly started out to execute vengeance, accompanied by Doc Holliday, Jack Vermillion, Sherman McMillan and Bill Johnson.

"They hunted down a Mexican named Florentine, whom they shot, and then, one by one, they got Frank Stilwell, Curly Bill and others who had had a hand, directly or indirectly, in the war. Wyatt Earp is still living."

favorable report. Before coming to Phoenix, the army engineers will visit the great projects in the northwest. They are scheduled to leave Chicago today for some point in Montana and will make stops in several western states before coming here.

As far as the visit of these engineers in Phoenix is concerned, their report will have no bearing on the matter of securing the money for completing the reservoir, as this has already been granted by Secretary of Interior Ballinger out of the regular reclamation fund.

Supervising Engineer L. C. Hill pointed out this morning that the Salt River valley is fortunate in the
